Response to Amendment

1. Applicant's amendment dated January 18, 2005 in which claims 1, 8 and 13 were amended has been entered.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 101

35 U.S.C. 101 reads as follows:

Whoever invents or discovers any new and useful process, machine, manufacture, or composition of matter, or any new and useful improvement thereof, may obtain a patent therefor, subject to the conditions and requirements of this title.

2. Claims 1-19 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 101 because the claimed invention is directed to non-statutory subject matter. Claims 1-12 are drawn to a process that does nothing more than manipulate an idea. Specifically, the claims define entities, perform mathematical or other processes on the entities, and analyze changes in the entities but do not claim a practical application; the claims do not produce a concrete, useful and tangible result to form the basis of statutory subject matter. The claims remain broad enough to read on an algorithm or series of mental steps, despite their usefulness. And again, product claims 13-19 read on software subroutines that also do not support statutory subject matter.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

3. Claims 1-19 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by '933 to Rappaport et al. Rappaport teaches, with reference to figures 1-3, a method of analyzing a sub-model of a full system model comprising the steps of:

defining the sub-model as a collection of data entities (by defining a room or building floor plan layout, Rappaport teaches that the walls or other physical parameters are "data" entities which are part of a sub-model e.g. one floor of a building, para. 0073; alternatively, the results of preliminary or a first set of calculations may be considered "data" entities, e.g. determining electrical performance values based on a given input of RF sources) and calculation entities (Rappaport teaches that the sub-model includes "calculation" entities such as electrical sources of RF noise, para. 0075 or the attenuation and other characteristics of the internal walls, para. 0073) and that certain "calculation" entities are converted into temporary data entities (Rappaport teaches that windows are assigned specific values such as 2dB penetration loss although that value would necessarily change based on many varying factors (e.g. weather)), identifying output entities as calculation entities that do not have an output to another entity (the entities such as received signal strength are output entities without output to another entity, para. 0075); and visually analyzing changes in the sub-model in response to performing the calculations for the calculation entities, wherein visually analyzing the changes in the sub-model includes analyzing changes in the size of the data entities (Rappaport teaches that visual analysis is performed after the calculations are performed (para. 0079) and that the analysis includes comparing changes in the size of data entities (para. 0081)).

Response to Arguments

4. Applicant's arguments with respect to claims 1-19 have been considered but are moot in view of the new grounds of rejection.

Conclusion

5. Applicant's amendment necessitated the new ground(s) of rejection presented in this Office action. Accordingly, THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. See MPEP § 706.07(a). Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the date of this final action.
